COURSE OBJECTIVES--CONTENT AND METHODS

The Midcareer Course is designed to enable potential executive officers to develop and widen their understanding of management practices, of the Agency and the Intelligence Community, and of the Government's involvement in international affairs.

The Course consists of three major segments of varying lengths. The topics covered through lectures, seminars, group discussions and field trips are:

1. The functions, relationships and problems of various Agency components.
2. The Intelligence Community as a whole and the relationships and functions of its member agencies.
3. Selected elements of national power and current developments in key international affairs.

ACHIEVEMENT RECORD

No evaluation of the student is made during the Course, and no final grade is given upon course completion.
